Principle 2: Establish and Disclose a Conflict of Interest Management Policy

As a securities investment trust enterprise operating within a highly regulated financial industry, the Company is subject to extensive regulatory requirements governing its business operations, personnel management, as well as the management and investment activities of investment funds and discretionary investment accounts. To effectively manage conflicts of interest, the Company has incorporated relevant conflict management requirements into its internal policies and procedures, including the Code of Conduct, Treating Customers Fairly Policy and Strategy, and Internal Control System relating to Performance Evaluation, Incentives, Disciplinary Measures, and Attendance Management.

Through these conflict of interest management policies, the Company seeks to ensure the sound management of institutional investments, investment funds, and discretionary investment accounts. In managing various types of conflicts of interest, the Company adheres to the principles of fiduciary duty, prudent management, client-first practices, conflict avoidance, prohibition of short-term trading, prevention of improper gain, and fair treatment of all clients.

In addition, the Company recognizes that the assets under its management may have a significant impact on capital markets and investee companies. Accordingly, when actual or potential conflicts of interest arise, the Company places the long-term interests of its capital providers, including clients and beneficiaries, above all other considerations and is committed to protecting their rights and interests. In addition to regularly updating employees on applicable laws and regulations, the Company has identified potential conflict of interest scenarios and established corresponding management measures and procedures for employees to follow.

1. Potential Conflict of Interest Scenarios

(1) Scenario 1: Conflicts Between Different Clients or Beneficiaries

Trade allocation among investment portfolios may result in certain portfolios not receiving the full benefit of transactions executed at the most favorable pricing.

(2) Scenario 2: Conflicts Between the Company and Clients or Beneficiaries

The Company may invest client assets in other investment funds. There may be incentives to invest in funds managed by the Company or its affiliates rather than more suitable third-party funds, thereby increasing the Company's revenues.

(3) Scenario 3: Conflicts Between Employees and Clients or Beneficiaries

Employees may engage in personal account trading, including investments in securities or equity-related derivatives that are also held by the funds they manage. Such activities may create conflicts between personal interests and client interests.

(4) Scenario 4: Conflicts Between the Company and Investee Companies

The Company may invest client assets in securities or equity-related derivatives issued by certain clients or distributors and may be influenced, directly or indirectly, by those parties when making or maintaining investment decisions.

(5) Scenario 5: Conflicts Between the Company and Related Parties

The Company may enter into transactions with related parties, which may give rise to actual or perceived conflicts of interest.

(6) Scenario 6: Conflicts Among Funds or Discretionary Accounts

Where a portfolio manager manages or co-manages multiple funds or discretionary accounts, conflicting investment decisions, including opposite trading positions in the same security or equity-related bond on the same day, may arise.

2. Conflict of Interest Management Measures

(1) Information Barriers and Confidentiality Arrangements

A. The Company's office premises are segregated according to departmental functions, and employees' duties and responsibilities are clearly defined.

B. All employees are required to execute confidentiality agreements and strictly comply with relevant policies to prevent the unauthorized disclosure of confidential business information.

C. The Company establishes system access rights and permissions based on employees' job responsibilities to control information flows and maintain information security.

(2) Personal Account Dealing

All employees must comply with the Company's Code of Conduct and internal control requirements when conducting personal investments to avoid actual or potential conflicts of interest arising from their trading activities.

(3) Management of Dual-Hatting and Concurrent Roles

A. Fund managers, discretionary investment managers, and investment analysts may undertake concurrent roles where permitted by applicable regulations. The Company's internal control system establishes procedures and principles designed to prevent conflicts of interest arising from such arrangements.

B. Where an individual manages multiple investment accounts, the manager must adhere to the principles established under the Company's internal control framework to ensure fair treatment of all clients.

(4) Management of Conflicts Involving Related Parties

A. Employees and their spouses who meet the criteria of a related party under applicable regulations must promptly disclose such relationships to the relevant departments.

B. The Company prepares a monthly related-party list and provides it to relevant departments as a control tool for investment monitoring purposes.

C. Information regarding the Company and its related-party entities is disclosed in the prospectus on a quarterly basis.

(5) Internal Control Framework

A. The Company recognizes that the establishment, implementation, and maintenance of an effective internal control system are the responsibility of both the Board of Directors and senior management and has established such a framework accordingly.

B. The purpose of the internal control system is to provide reasonable assurance regarding the achievement of objectives relating to operational effectiveness and efficiency, profitability and performance, safeguarding of assets, reliability, timeliness and transparency of reporting, and compliance with applicable laws, regulations, and internal requirements.

C. The Company evaluates the design and operating effectiveness of its internal control system in accordance with applicable regulatory requirements and assessment criteria.

D. The results of the annual internal control assessment are disclosed in the Company's prospectus to demonstrate the effectiveness of the control framework.

(6) Alignment of Remuneration with Performance and Risk Management

A. Employee compensation is determined based on qualifications, experience, job responsibilities, and prevailing market compensation levels.

B. Incentive compensation may include year-end bonuses, business development awards, and equity-based compensation.

C. The Company's performance assessment and remuneration framework takes into consideration overall business performance, historical operating results, retained earnings, future business prospects, and anticipated risks. Non-financial factors are also incorporated, including compliance with applicable laws and regulations, adherence to industry standards and internal policies, audit findings, client complaints, protection of client interests, and service quality. The framework may be adjusted periodically to reflect evolving business needs and risk considerations. Any material risk identified through the assessment process shall be reported to the Board of Directors.

(7) Compensation and Remediation Measures

A. Where the Company intentionally or negligently breaches applicable laws, regulations, or contractual obligations and causes losses to a fund or discretionary investment account, it shall be liable for compensation. Except in cases involving wilful misconduct or negligence by the Company, its agents, representatives, or employees, the Company shall not be responsible for investment gains, losses, or damages suffered by beneficiaries or custodians.

B. Where an erroneous trade or investment decision in breach of applicable requirements necessitates a reversing transaction, any gains resulting from the correction shall accrue to the affected account(s), while any losses shall be borne by the Company and reimbursed to the affected account(s).

C. Where adjustments to a fund's net asset value (NAV) are required due to differences in trading practices, time zones, exchange rates, taxation, or other factors, and the adjustment exceeds the applicable tolerance threshold, the Company shall make the required compensation in accordance with applicable regulations. Where the NAV has been overstated, the Company shall reimburse the fund for any excess redemption proceeds previously paid.

D. The Company shall not delay payment of redemption proceeds. Any delay in payment shall render the Company liable for any losses incurred by affected beneficiaries.

(8) Training and Awareness

In addition to maintaining a robust internal control framework to protect client interests, the Company regularly conducts employee training programs covering, among other topics, information security, anti-money laundering, and regulatory compliance requirements.

The Company places significant emphasis on ethical conduct and sound internal controls to prevent conflicts of interest from arising. Where an actual or potential conflict of interest is identified, client interests shall always take precedence. The Company is committed to appropriately managing all potential conflict scenarios through established policies and procedures.

Any conflict of interest issue, or potential issue requiring escalation, should first be submitted to the local Compliance Department for review and assessment. The Compliance Department will determine whether further escalation is necessary and provide appropriate guidance on the matter.

Principle 3: Ongoing Monitoring of Investee Companies

To ensure the Company obtains sufficient and effective information for evaluating the nature, timing, and extent of engagement and interaction with investee companies, and to establish a sound foundation for equity investment decisions, the Company monitors a range of issues related to investee companies. These include, but are not limited to, relevant news, financial performance, industry outlook, business strategies, environmental protection efforts, corporate social responsibility, labor rights, and corporate governance. The specific practices are as follows:

1. In line with its social responsibility, the Company continuously monitors the environmental impact of invested companies' operations, corporate governance issues, and other related social topics. This enables the Company to better understand and communicate with investee companies regarding industry risks and strategies. The Company also refers to investment evaluation reports from professional institutions and actively participates in investor conferences and company visits to gather relevant information for investment analysis and decision-making.
2. The Company's internal control system incorporates ESG considerations into the stock investment screening process. It evaluates the sustainability strategies and investment value of investee companies from multiple perspectives. For foreign equities, if ESG criteria are not met during the annual review—such as a Governance Disclosure Score below internal standards on Bloomberg, or a Sustainalytics ESG rating of "Severe" or "High"—an explanation must be provided and approved by relevant personnel before inclusion in the investment pool. The Sustainable Investment Specialist prepares a quarterly ESG analysis report for equity funds. The report incorporates data from Sustainalytics and MSCI ESG, covering metrics such as overall ESG assessments, Carbon Footprint, Temperature Alignment, and comparisons of ESG risk profiles against the relevant benchmark index.
3. If an investee company experiences significant financial or operational issues, the Company shall promptly formulate a response plan. If necessary, the company may be removed from the stock investment pool.

Principle 4: Appropriate Dialogue and Engagement with Investee Companies

The Company engages in appropriate dialogue and interaction with investee companies to gain deeper insights into and communicate with their management regarding industry risks and strategic responses. Through such engagement, the Company strives to establish a mutual understanding with investee companies in pursuit of long-term value creation. The approaches adopted include:

1. The Company communicates with the management of investee companies through various means, including conference calls, in-person meetings, participation in investor conferences, and attendance at annual general meetings or extraordinary shareholders' meetings. The Company places emphasis on the quality and impact of such engagements, as well as on identifying key issues for future dialogue. These interactions serve as a basis for subsequent investment decisions.
2. If an investee company is found to have significantly violated corporate governance principles or is deemed likely to harm the long-term value of the Company's clients, beneficiaries, or shareholders on specific issues, the Company will, to the extent possible, offer constructive suggestions to the investee company. The goal is to support the company's sustainable development and fulfillment of its social responsibilities. The Company will also follow up with the management of the investee company from time to time to understand how the issues are being addressed, to protect the interests of clients or beneficiaries. Where necessary, the Company may act in concert with other institutional investors to strengthen the protection of such interests.

Principle 5: Establish and Disclose a Clear Voting Policy and Voting Records

To maximize the interests of clients, beneficiaries, and shareholders, the Company exercises voting rights attached to stocks held by its funds in accordance with the Regulations Governing Securities Investment Trust Enterprises, fund trust agreements, and other applicable rules. The Company does not automatically support proposals submitted by the management of investee companies.

The Company has established and disclosed its voting policy in accordance with applicable regulations:

1. If any single fund managed by the Company holds at least 300,000 shares of an investee company, and the total holdings across all funds reach 1,000,000 shares; or if any single fund holds shares of an investee company that has adopted an electronic voting system amounting to at least 0.01% of the company's total outstanding shares, and the total holdings across all funds reach 0.03%, the Company shall assign internal personnel to attend the shareholders' meeting in person or exercise voting rights via electronic voting.
2. The Company shall actively exercise voting rights at investee companies' shareholders' meetings. Unless otherwise permitted by law, the responsible unit shall complete the necessary procedures for determining the method and content of voting upon receipt of the meeting notice and prior to the meeting date or electronic voting deadline. Relevant documentation shall be retained for record-keeping.

3. The Company may exercise voting rights in writing or electronically in accordance with Article 177-1 of the Company Act. If the investee company adopts electronic voting, the Company shall, in principle, vote electronically; otherwise, internal personnel shall be assigned to attend the meeting in person.
4. Voting decisions shall be made in the best interests of clients or beneficiaries. The Company shall not directly or indirectly participate in the management of investee companies or engage in improper arrangements. Voting rights obtained shall not be transferred, sold, or used to receive any form of benefit.
5. Prior to exercising voting rights, the Company shall evaluate and analyze meeting proposals (e.g., mergers, director/supervisor compensation) and corporate governance matters (including the reasonableness of remuneration systems). If proposals or the investee company's practices raise concerns about environmental or social mismanagement that may harm shareholder interests, or if the company reports consecutive annual losses while increasing total or average director/supervisor compensation, the Company may engage in pre-meeting discussions with management as necessary.
6. To respect the professional judgment of investee companies and support their long-term development, the Company generally supports proposals submitted by the board of directors. However, proposals that violate corporate governance principles (e.g., inaccurate financial reporting) or have negative environmental or social impacts (e.g., pollution, human rights violations, labor exploitation) will generally not be supported. The Company also generally supports candidates nominated by the current board for director and supervisor positions. If the management is deemed to be operating in a manner detrimental to the company or shareholder interests, such nominations will not be supported. For proposals involving the election of directors or supervisors without a nomination system, or related proposals on non-compete clauses, the Company will abstain due to the inability to assess candidate qualifications in a timely manner.
7. Voting decisions shall be based on the evaluation results of the shareholders' meeting proposals.
8. The Company shall properly document and retain all materials related to the exercise of voting rights and disclose voting records annually on its official website.

Principle 6: Periodic Disclosure of Stewardship Activities

The Company will periodically disclose its stewardship activities, conflict of interest policy, voting policy, and the implementation status of stewardship practices on its official website. The Company also evaluates the effectiveness of its stewardship efforts. Disclosures include this Statement of Adherence, explanations for any principles not followed, participation in investee companies' shareholders' meetings, voting records, and other material matters.

Principle 7: Service Providers Should Offer Supportive Stewardship Services to Institutional Investors

Where the Company engages service providers to assist in the execution of certain stewardship responsibilities, it shall ensure that such providers adhere to the principles of the Stewardship Code. Service providers are expected to regularly review and disclose their stewardship activities, potential conflict of interest scenarios, and processes for providing voting recommendations. ESG considerations shall also be incorporated into their services.
