

Angana Barua

Communications Coordinator, Hyderabad

What it's like to work at Invesco?

Every day is a new day when you are working at Invesco. A typical day is charged and exciting because you have gazillion things to look forward to. Working in an environment that presents stimulating challenges makes every day worthwhile. In a nutshell, every day is 'atypical' at Invesco!

How would you describe the attributes of a successful employee at Invesco?

A successful employee at Invesco is an innovator and collaborator par excellence – not only do the work ethics and the culture at Invesco teach you to be multifaceted, but you are also on top of the game, thanks to all the learning that happens here. An employee thinks differently for every challenge, adapts seamlessly and learns the trick for a positive work-life integration.

What do you find most valuable about the Invesco Women's Network?

“Being a part of the Invesco Women's Network has transformed my life at Invesco.”

Being a part of the Invesco Women's Network has transformed my life at Invesco. My team members here are inspiring ladies who juggle their lives so adeptly that it amazes me. When I first joined IWN, I was fortunate to be acquainted with Parvathi Sriram (People Development Consultant, a mother of two and a cyclist). Inspired by her resilience, I decided to get into cycling and I have never looked back. There is something to learn from every member here, and this is what makes IWN a beautiful platform.

What are some of your personal passions outside your career?

Since I got into cycling, I started loving the sport and I have been able to successfully integrate it with Invesco. How? I commute to work daily on my cycle and whenever we have external cycling events, I encourage all colleagues to actively participate. On some weekends, cyclists from Invesco get together and ride. In fact, Invesco is one of those few organizations in India that even has a parking space for cyclists here (Unlike the West, cycling as a sport in India is still taking baby steps). You feel proud to be a part of an organization that helps you realize your passions and discover a side that you never knew existed!

