The driving principle behind the “20 for 2016” Morgan Stanley Research report was simple:

Create a list of companies that investors will want to be holding in 2016.

This long-term view attempts to look past the near-term economic and market challenges, and focus on opportunities that may outperform over the life of the trust.

Exclusive access to Morgan Stanley Research’s best ideas

Invesco Unit Trusts is providing Morgan Stanley Financial Advisors exclusive access to this trust, built from the names in the “20 for 2016” report.

Diversification does not guarantee a profit or eliminate the risk of loss.

1 For the list, Morgan Stanley Research is taking a longer-term view. Morgan Stanley Research is not asserting that the stocks are all Buys; there was no prerequisite in the poll that the stocks be rated Overweight, nor any specific assumption about the economic cycle. Morgan Stanley Research believes its analysts’ strengths lie in understanding their industries and what will differentiate potential winners from losers as industry value chains evolve. It is these insights that the report seeks to exploit.

Risk considerations
There is no assurance the trust will achieve its investment objective. An investment in this unit investment trust is subject to market risk, which is the possibility that the market values of securities owned by the trust will decline and that the value of trust units may therefore be less than what you paid for them. This trust is unmanaged and its portfolio is not intended to change during the trust's life except in limited circumstances. Accordingly, you can lose money investing in this trust.

Common stocks do not assure dividend payments. Dividends are paid only when declared by an issuer's board of directors and the amount of any dividend may vary over time.

The trust is concentrated in the consumer discretionary and consumer staples sectors. Companies that manufacture, distribute and provide consumer products and services face risks such as intense competition, the lack of serious barriers to entry for online entrants, economic recession and a slowdown in consumer spending trends.

You should note that the Securities were selected on the basis of the criteria set forth on the reverse page and that the Portfolio may continue to purchase or hold Securities, notwithstanding the fact that Morgan Stanley Research may have revised its opinion with respect to any individual Security based on the selection process employed by Morgan Stanley Research when preparing the original report or any subsequent report. In particular, any subsequent publication of a similar type of list of stocks or an update of any referenced report by Morgan Stanley Research will not affect the composition of the Portfolio.

†The estimated net annual income per unit and initial distribution month that appear on the previous page are as of 03/19/13 and are based on the most recently declared ordinary dividends or interim and final dividends accounting for any foreign withholding taxes. The actual net annual dividend distributions you receive will vary from the estimate set forth above with changes in the trust's fees and expenses, in dividends received, currency fluctuations and with the sale of securities. The actual net annual dividends are expected to decrease over time because a portion of the securities included in the trust will be sold over time to pay for organization costs. Securities may also be sold to pay regular fees and expenses during the trust's life. The trustee will make distributions of income and capital on each monthly distribution date to unitholders of record on the preceding record date, provided that the total cash held for distribution equals at least 0.1% of the portfolio's net asset value. Undistributed income and capital will be distributed in the next month in which the total cash held for distribution equals at least 0.1% of the portfolio's net asset value.

Value, blend and growth are types of investment styles. Growth investing generally seeks stocks that offer the potential for greater-than-average earnings growth, and may entail greater risk than value or blend investing. Value investing generally seeks stocks that may be sound investments but are temporarily out of favor in the marketplace, and may entail less risk than growth investing. A blend investment combines the two styles.
