

Dividend Sustainability Portfolio

Symbol: DVST193

What makes an aristocrat? A commitment to dividends. The strategy invests in companies that have followed a policy of consistently increasing dividends in each of the last 25 consecutive years.

Total return

Invesco believes that sustainable dividend income and capital appreciation potential are important to total return expectations. Corporate managers may use stable and increasing dividends as a sign of confidence in their firm's future prospects, while investors may consider such track records as signs of corporate maturity and strength.¹

Income sustainability and quality

Companies with strong dividend coverage should be able to increase dividend payments.¹

Access to industry leaders

The S&P 500 Dividend Aristocrats Index tracks the performance of 57 companies in the S&P 500 Index that have increased their dividends for the last 25 consecutive years. A dividend aristocrat tends to be a large blue-chip company and many of the companies listed on the Index are familiar household names.

² The above chart is presented for the purpose of illustrating the performance of the S&P 500 Dividend Aristocrats Index relative to the S&P 500 Index in certain time periods. This performance is not indicative of how this (or any) series of the Dividend Sustainability Portfolio will perform. Investors should further note that each series of the Dividend Sustainability Portfolio invests in a subjectively selected portfolio consisting of a subset of the stocks currently included in the S&P 500 Dividend Aristocrats Index.

Cumulative total return and total return measure change in the value of an investment assuming reinvestment of all dividends and capital gains. As a result of recent market activity, current performance may vary. Past performance is not a guarantee of future results and the payment of dividends is never assured and may vary over time. The performance above is not that of any DVST Portfolio.

About risk

There is no assurance the trust will achieve its investment objective. An investment in this unit investment trust is subject to market risk, which is the possibility that the market values of securities owned by the trust will decline and that the value of trust units may therefore be less than what you paid for them. This trust is unmanaged and its portfolio is not intended to change during the trust's life except in limited circumstances. Accordingly, you can lose money investing in this trust. The trust should be considered as part of a long-term investment strategy and you should consider your ability to pursue it by investing in successive trusts, if available. You will realize tax consequences associated with investing from one series to the next.

Common stocks do not assure dividend payments. Dividends are paid only when declared by an issuer's board of directors and the amount of any dividend may vary over time. There can be no guarantee or assurance that companies will declare dividends in the future or that if declared, they will remain at current levels or increase over time.

The financial condition of an issuer may worsen or its credit ratings may drop, resulting in a reduction in the value of your Units. This may occur at any point in time, including during the initial offering period.

You could experience dilution of your investment if the size of the Portfolio is increased as Units are sold. There is no assurance that your investment will maintain its proportionate share in the Portfolio's profits and losses.

The Portfolio does not replicate all of the components of the S&P 500 Dividend Aristocrats Index or its component weightings and the stocks in the Portfolio will not change if the index components, or their weightings within the index, change. The performance of the Portfolio will not correspond with the S&P 500 Dividend Aristocrats Index for this reason and because the Portfolio incurs a sales charge and expenses. The Portfolio is not intended to replicate the performance of the index.

The Portfolio is concentrated in securities issued by companies in the consumer discretionary and consumer staples sectors. Companies that manufacture, distribute and provide consumer products and services face risks such as intense competition, substantial government regulation, economic recession, and a slowdown in consumer spending trends.

Value, blend and growth are types of investment styles. Growth investing generally seeks stocks that offer the potential for greater-than-average earnings growth, and may entail greater risk than value or blend investing. Value investing generally seeks stocks that may be sound investments but are temporarily out of favor in the marketplace, and may entail less risk than growth investing. A blend investment combines the two styles.

The S&P 500 Index is an unmanaged index generally representative of the US stock market and consists of 500 large-cap common stocks actively traded in the United States.

The S&P 500 Dividend Aristocrats Index is an index composed of 40 companies in the S&P 500 Index that have had an increase in dividends for 25 consecutive years. The S&P 500 Dividend Aristocrats Index tracks the performance of these companies. A dividend aristocrat tends to be a large blue-chip company. Indices are statistical composites and their returns do not include payment of any sales charges or fees an investor would pay to purchase the securities they represent. Such costs would lower performance. It is not possible to invest directly in an index.
