Jon Vogler

Senior Analyst, Retirement Research

Jon draws on extensive pension experience to offer retirement thought leadership for Invesco. He edits and updates select Invesco Consulting presentations and replies to advisor questions based on our webinar series. In addition to writing the firm's "Retirement Insights" blog, he tracks legislative and regulatory developments and contributes as a writer and editor to a variety of retirement-related Invesco communications. He is also a member of Invesco's Defined Contribution Institute (IDCI).

Prior to joining Invesco in 2008, Jon spent more than 25 years in the research, writing, compliance and underwriting areas of the retirement services industry, including roles as a senior consultant at Mutual Benefit Life's pension consulting firm and as a compliance manager in the Automatic Data Processing retirement services division. Jon earned the Fellow, Life Management Institute (FLMI) and Competent Toastmaster (CTM) designations. He has a BA in History from Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey.

Jon previously served on his township's advisory committee for disabilities and as a Sunday School teacher and financial secretary at his local church. Jon lives with his wife and son in New Jersey.
