

Invesco NASDAQ 100 ETF (QQQM)

Access the Nasdaq-100 Index®

Provides access to innovative companies continuing to drive growth:

- The Nasdaq-100 Index has had strong performance vs. S&P 500® and Russell 1000 Growth Indexes
- Large- and mega-cap companies with sound fundamentals
- The potential benefits of continued innovation across sectors

Decades of strong large-cap performance

Both growth stocks and broad equity markets have performed well over the last 20 years. The Nasdaq-100 Index has outperformed both the S&P 500® and the Russell 1000 Growth Indexes by providing access to leading large-cap growth companies at the forefront of innovation.¹

Total Cumulative Return (3/10/1999–03/31/2026)

The above chart is presented for the purposes of illustrating the long-term performance of large-cap growth markets versus the broader market over time. The starting time period is based on the inception of the oldest product in the Invesco QQQ Innovation Suite, Invesco QQQ ETF, which has an existing track record that can be found on invesco.com/etfs. Index performance is not indicative of fund performance, nor is it an indication of how a fund could or will perform. An investment cannot be made directly into an Index. Past performance is not a guarantee of future results.

Fundamentally sound

The Nasdaq-100 Index provides access to large- and mega-cap companies that have shown higher historical growth rates — resulting in outperformance against industry benchmarks (20-year growth rates).²

Committed to innovation through investment

A key measure of a company's commitment to innovation is research and development spending. Companies in the Nasdaq-100 Index continue to reinvest in their own development at a high rate.⁴

R&D Expense as % of Revenue

Innovation beyond tech

Today innovation spurs growth and efficiency across the economy. The breadth of this impact is reflected in the Nasdaq-100 Index's diversification well beyond the technology sector.⁵
