Market overview

+ Key issues that concerned investors in the second quarter carried over into the third quarter. US-China trade conflict worried investors and stifled business investment, even as the Federal Reserve cut interest rates in July and September. This environment, along with signs of slowing global economic growth, fueled volatility in August. The US Treasury yield curve inverted several times, raising fear of a US recession. As a result, August saw increased risk aversion, with investors crowding into asset classes perceived as safe havens. However, the Fed's accommodative tone provided some support for risk assets. Despite increased volatility, the S&P 500 Index returned 1.70%. The S&P 1500 Value Index posted a gain in the third quarter. Sector results were mixed as utilities, information technology (IT) and real estate posted the largest gains, while energy, health care and materials declined.

Positioning and outlook

- + We use an intrinsic value approach to select investments for the fund. The portfolio is not constructed based on a short-term macro-economic view. Instead, positioning is driven by bottom-up stock selection based on intrinsic value. We seek to create wealth by maintaining a long-term investment horizon and investing in companies that we believe are significantly undervalued on an absolute basis.
- + Given our focus on intrinsic value and a long-term investment horizon, the fund is currently positioned with more economically sensitive stocks than its peers.
- + For some time, we have found very limited investment opportunities in the yield-oriented sectors of utilities and REITs, given their unattractive valuations.
- + At quarter end, the difference between the market price and the estimated intrinsic value of the fund's holdings was very attractive, according to our estimation. Though there is no assurance that market value will ever reflect our estimate of the fund's intrinsic value, we believe the gap between price and estimated intrinsic value indicates above-average capital appreciation potential.
- + We have been taking advantage of recent short-term, fear-induced market volatility to invest in new opportunities. We believe the investments we have been making may continue to position the fund for solid absolute and relative performance over the long term.
- + Going forward, we will work hard to protect and grow the fund's estimated intrinsic value. We thank you for your investment and for sharing our long-term perspective.

Performance highlights

+ The fund's Class A shares at net asset value (NAV) underperformed the S&P 1500 Value Index. (Please see the investment results table on page 2 for fund and index performance.) Performance drivers were largely stock specific. Select holdings in the consumer discretionary and materials sectors were among the largest contributors to absolute return, while select holdings in consumer discretionary and industrials were the largest detractors. Underweights in IT, utilities and REITs hurt return relative to the benchmark as these sectors performed well. Overweights in energy and materials hurt relative return as these sectors underperformed.

Contributors to performance

- + LKQ is a leading automobile parts distributor. Shares rose after management announced an operational improvement program for its European business and an ownership stake in LKQ by activist investor ValueAct Capital.
- + Huntsman manufactures differentiated organic chemical products used mainly in adhesives, aerospace, automotive and construction. Shares rose after management announced an agreement to sell the company's chemical intermediates and surfactants businesses for $2.1 billion.

Detractors from performance

- + Shares of Delphi Technologies declined along with other auto parts suppliers due to weak global auto sales that are negatively affecting near-term sales and earnings. We believe there is significant upside to the stock price based on our estimate of intrinsic value.
- + Fluor's stock price fell after the company announced larger-than-expected project charges following replacement of its CEO in the second quarter.

About risk

Convertible securities may be affected by market interest rates, the risk of issuer default, the value of the underlying stock or the issuer's right to buy back the convertible securities.

Derivatives may be more volatile and less liquid than traditional investments and are subject to market, interest rate, credit, leverage, counterparty and management risks. An investment in a derivative could lose more than the cash amount invested.

The risks of investing in securities of foreign issuers, including emerging markets, can include fluctuations in foreign currencies, political and economic instability, and foreign taxation issues.

Preferred securities may include provisions that permit the issuer to defer or omit distributions for a certain period of time, and reporting the distribution for tax purposes may be required, even though the income may not have been received. Further, preferred securities may lose substantial value due to the omission or deferment of dividend payments.

Stocks of small and mid-sized companies tend to be more vulnerable to adverse developments, may be more volatile, and may be illiquid or restricted as to resale.

A value style of investing is subject to the risk that the valuations never improve or that the returns will trail other styles of investing or the overall stock markets.

The fund is subject to certain other risks. Please see the current prospectus for more information regarding the risks associated with an investment in the fund.
