

Globalize your thinking

Many investors limit their portfolio's exposure to opportunities. For example, the average US investor holds nearly 75% of their stock portfolio in US companies. And yet, only 25% of gross domestic product (GDP) is from the US.¹ Are you limiting your opportunity set?

Why globalize your thinking?

Great companies across the world are capitalizing on transformational forces, including these three.

01 The growing middle class

The middle class is fueling growth in goods and services.

By 2030, the size of the global middle class is expected to reach 5.3 billion, or a third of GDP growth.²

02 The technological revolution

Technology is helping every industry work faster and smarter.

The cloud computing industry alone is predicted to grow from $371 billion in 2020 to $832 billion in 2025.³

03 The aging population

People around the world are living longer and spending differently.

The number of people 65 and over is expected to double in the next 25 years, and they're already spending more to be healthy and active.⁴

Investments to help you access investment opportunities globally

Through our time-tested, active approach to global markets, we've discovered enduring opportunities around the world to help our clients achieve their long-term financial goals. Our team manages several unique portfolios, but three common investment principles are foundational throughout:

Exceptional companies benefiting from structural growth:

We look for quality companies with strong long-term financial performance, sustainable competitive advantages, and innovative products — and we buy those stocks at attractive prices.

High-conviction portfolio management:

Our active, bottom-up approach isn't designed to follow a benchmark. Instead, we seek opportunities regardless of country or sector.

Long-term perspective:

We look for companies that can deliver potential solid shareholder returns for years, and we typically hold our positions for five years or longer.

With respect to Investment Manager model portfolios specifically, there is no Style Manager Expense Rate (as defined in the IAP brochure) payable to the Investment Managers. As a general matter, Investment Managers intend to allocate a significant percentage of the portfolio to funds for which the Investment Manager and/or its affiliates serve as investment manager ("Investment Manager Affiliated Funds"). As discussed above, clients will indirectly bear fund expenses as shareholders for their account assets allocated to Investment Manager Affiliated Funds and funds for which the Investment Managers and/or their affiliates do not receive compensation. For client account assets allocated to the Investment Managers Affiliated Funds, fees will be received by the Investment Managers and/or their affiliates directly from the respective Investment Manager Affiliated Fund. These compensation arrangements create a conflict of interest relating to the Investment Managers' selection of funds (including from among the Investment Manager Affiliated Funds) for the strategy and the receipt of potentially higher compensation based on the selection. Investment Managers have an incentive to select Investment Manager Affiliated Funds for the strategy, including Investment Managers Affiliated Funds with higher expenses, over other funds (including other Investment Manager Affiliated Funds) with lower expenses because the fees that the Investment Managers and/or their affiliates receive for client account assets in the Investment Manager Affiliated Funds are their compensation with respect to the strategy. This conflict of interest may result in a strategy that achieves a level of performance, or reflects higher fees, less favorable to the strategy than otherwise would be the case if the Investment Manager did not allocate to an Investment Manager Affiliated Fund.
