- Prices and yields are representative of values as of the close of the market on 7/9/20. Common stocks do not assure dividend payments and the amount of a dividend if any, may vary over time. There can be no guarantee or assurance that companies will declare dividends in the future or that if declared, they will remain at current levels or increase over time. The “Average” stock dividend yield listed at the bottom of this column is not indicative of the income that unitholders may receive.
- Source: Bloomberg L.P. 7/9/20. Please note that these bond yields are for yield comparison purposes only and are not a recommendation to buy or sell the bond. Please also note that the selected bond yields are for 5-Year bonds issued by those individual companies and furthermore, similar longer maturity corporate bonds generally have higher yields and are more stable and secure than dividend yields. Further, the risks associated with the ownership of stocks are generally greater than the risks associated with the ownership of bonds. Bond income payments are a financial obligation of the issuer, while dividend payments are not.

About risk (SDOW204)

There is no assurance the trust will achieve its investment objective. An investment in this unit investment trust is subject to market risk, which is the possibility that the market values of securities owned by the trust will decline and that the value of trust units may therefore be less than what you paid for them. Recently, an outbreak of a respiratory disease caused by a novel coronavirus, COVID-19, has spread globally in a short period of time, resulting in the disruption of, and delays in, production and supply chains and the delivery of healthcare services and processes, as well as the cancellation of organized events and educational institutions, quarantines, a decline in consumer demand for certain goods and services, and general concern and uncertainty. COVID-19 and its effects have contributed to increased volatility in global markets, severe losses, liquidity constraints, and lowered yields. The duration of such effects cannot yet be determined but could be present for an extended period of time and may adversely affect the value of your Units. This trust is unmanaged and its portfolio is not intended to change during the trust's life except in limited circumstances. Accordingly, you can lose money investing in this trust. The trust should be considered as part of a long-term investment strategy and you should consider your ability to pursue it by investing in successive trusts, if available. You will realize tax consequences associated with investing from one series to the next.

Common stocks do not assure dividend payments. Dividends are paid only when declared by an issuer's board of directors and the amount of any dividend may vary over time. There can be no guarantee or assurance that companies will declare dividends in the future or that if declared, they will remain at current levels or increase over time.

The financial condition of an issuer may worsen or its credit ratings may drop, resulting in a reduction in the value of your Units. This may occur at any point in time, including during the initial offering period.

You could experience dilution of your investment if the size of the Portfolio is increased as Units are sold. There is no assurance that your investment will maintain its proportionate share in the Portfolio's profits and losses.

The Portfolio holds a relatively small number of stocks. You may encounter more price volatility than would occur in an investment diversified among a greater number of stocks.

The Dow Jones Industrial AverageSM (DJIASM) is a product of S&P Dow Jones Indices, a CME Group company, has been licensed for use and is an unmanaged index generally representative of the U.S. stock market. The DJIA is a price-weighted index of the 30 largest, most widely held stocks traded on the New York Stock Exchange. It is not possible to invest directly in an index. The "Dow Jones Industrial Average," "The Dow" and "DJIA" are service marks of Dow Jones Trademark Holdings, LLC ("Dow Jones") and have been licensed for use for certain purposes by Invesco and the trust. The trust, based on the Dow Jones Industrial Average, is not sponsored, endorsed, sold or promoted by Dow Jones, CME or their respective affiliates and none of them makes any representation regarding the advisability of investing in such product.

Value, blend and growth are types of investment styles. Growth investing generally seeks stocks that offer the potential for greater-than-average earnings growth, and may entail greater risk than value or blend investing. Value investing generally seeks stocks that may be sound investments but are temporarily out of favor in the marketplace, and may entail less risk than growth investing. A blend investment combines the two styles.

Trust Objective: The portfolio seeks above-average total return. The portfolio seeks to achieve its objective by investing in a portfolio of stocks.
